Article's Evaluation Process

The Editor-in-Chief makes an initial evaluation of each manuscript. If the topic and treatment seem potentially appropriate for the journal, the manuscript will be assigned to an Associate Editor who oversees the review process. Once the review process has been completed, the Associate Editor recommends acceptance, revision, or rejection of the manuscript. The final decision will be made by the Editor-in-Chief.

Papers will be primary tested for plagiarism. If the paper is suspected of plagiarism, it will be automatically rejected.

Roa Iktissadia Review has a "double blind" review process: authors are not told who reviewed their paper and reviewers are not told who wrote the paper. Peer reviewers are informed of the identity of the authors after the manuscript is either accepted or rejected. The reviewers give their advice on publication opportunity, together with their observations to the Editor-in-Chief, who will transmit them to the authors. If the reviewers have contrary opinions, the Editor-in-Chief may ask the opinion of a third reviewer.

After a decision is reached, a reviewer is free to contact the authors privately about the manuscript. A decision on the manuscript may be expected generally within 3 to 4 months of submission; delays in obtaining reviews may prolong this process. Manuscripts are sent out for review electronically, and all correspondence takes place via e-mail (roa.iktissadia@gmail.com).

In case of acceptance after the modification, the author of the article must make the required corrections within a period not exceeding ten days.

If the article is accepted, the author must send a copyright transfer certificate (Roa Iktissadia_Copyright Transfer and Declaration En.doc) under the heading "Guide to Author" in the form of a compressed file. The certificate can be downloaded from the journal's web space at the platform.
